Tins

Give your guests the impression they are getting something off the supermarket shelf when in reality you are presenting them your latest culinary creation. These aluminum sardine tins offer you a unique way to present dishes at your restaurant or next catered event. These tins do not seal and lids are for aesthetic purposes only. We recommend creating or using a label of some kind to seal the lid down and add a personal touch product.

FATA PAPER

Fata® paper (loosely translated "Fata" means magical in Italian) an innovative product that can be made into see-through cooking pouches! It allows you to cook in a bag so that all the flavors and juices are concentrated. Then you can bring it to the table and serve with all the aroma (and drama) intact when the bag is opened. It is sold in rolls that can be easily cut, folded and tied with string or kitchen twine. Now available in convenient, pre-cut packs.

How Does It Work?

Fata® Paper comes on a roll either 10 meters or 50 meters long by 50 cm (20") wide or in pre-cut 50 cm square sheets. With knife or scissors, cut a piece approximately 20" long. Place the food in the middle. Fold up and tie with string, twine or ribbon. That's it! To measure the temperature inside the pouch, use a laser thermometer from the outside or a probe thermometer pushed through the tied top. Use scissors to cut open the pouch.

What Are The Benefits?

- Healthy, Light Cooking - less fats and oils, because food cooks in its own juices.
- Tastier Food - flavors are trapped and only released when the plate reaches the table.
- Surprise and Excitement - the clear pouch is opened at the table with a rush of fragrance and visual sensations.
- Speed - food cooks faster.
- Drama - cook right at the table for crowd pleasing effects.
- Convenience - portions can be prepared ahead of time (even frozen in the pouch) and cooked or "finished" just before serving.
- Use Fewer Pots - clean-up is quick and easy because there are few or no pots.

What Do I Use It For?

Everything! Use it to make soups, chowders, steamed fish, stewed meats and vegetables, even warmed or baked fruit.

The see-through pouches can be:

- Cooked directly on a hot surface.
- Heated in the microwave.
- Immersed in a water bath.
- Baked in the oven up to 425 °F.
- Immersed in hot oil, no hotter than 425 °F.
- Put in the freezer down to -50 °F.

Helpful Tips

- Don't seal the pouch too tight, or pressure builds up and tiny holes may develop.
- If tightly sealed, make a pin hole with a toothpick.
- Let frozen pouches warm to room temperature before placing on heat.

SOUS VIDE LOW TEMPERATURE COOKING

The term Sous Vide literally translates into "under vacuum", and has been adopted as the name for a cooking method that relies on precise temperature control. Foods cooked in this method are typically vacuum sealed in a non-reactive plastic pouch and heated in a water bath at a specific temperature until a desired level of doneness has been reached. This exacting technique provides unmatched control and consistency that cannot be found in other cooking methods.
